

WILLIAM TORBITT PRIMARY SCHOOL

As a growing primary school, William Torbitt Primary School saw a need to expand the lunch hall and catering facilities available for the children attending the school.

Working closely with Neilcott Construction, we were subcontracted to design and install the catering areas and servery of the primary school.

Ian Fowler - Senior Surveyor, Neilcott Constructions

This was an exciting time for the primary school as the proposed plans for development in building works was approved. The overall project included two new wings for classrooms, two new 2 storey toilet blocks and an extension to the hall to accommodate dining and a kitchen area for the growing school.

CES was the ideal partner for the kitchen and servery requirements for the project because of their paramount experience in providing commercial kitchen catering equipment and developing serveries for schools. From the beginning to the end of the project, the company understood the requirements for the kitchen and servery, from sourcing catering equipment to reduce preparation times, to ensuring service and seating was simple and easy to follow for the pupils, however ultimately maintaining within the budgets of the client.

During the build towards the lead up to Christmas, we worked closely with the client and CES, developing the catering area, ensuring we kept to the timescale of completion. The works started during term time to the lead up towards the festive period, which meant there would be some clear challenges for deliveries and installation.

Without any doubt or questions, CES managed all the deliveries and installations of the kitchen and servery through to completion in the agreed timescales. The work was completed to a high standard and, I fully recommend CES for future works, simply for the efficient service and proven track record they provided as a business to my client. Having to manage a complete project build is enough work alone, therefore it was a breath of fresh air and a pleasure working with CES, who offered the complete commercial catering equipment solution from design, supply, installation and completion.
